RUGS | Indoor
BAXTER P.

The hallmark of the Berbère rug is the complex manual technique used to work the wool, which recalls the traditional processes used for early-20th-century Berber Moroccan rugs. Each rug is spun and knotted entirely by hand on traditional vertical looms, and then finished with sophisticated handicraft techniques that result in unique pieces with their own identity. Skilled craftsmen scissor the surface of the pile to create the irregularities that distinguish each rug, then proceed with the characteristic patterns and side fringes woven one by one in the style of ancient Berber rugs. The black and white versions of the rug are made from undyed wool, while the other colours are produced using vegetable dyes.

Model: this rug is completely hand-knotted on traditional vertical looms in hand-spun wool according to the characteristics of the Berber-Moroccan rugs of the early 20th century.

Structure: the finishing process is very elaborate: after the first shave and the handwash, every single rug is treated in order to create a unique product; a skilled craftsman works on the surface with scissors in order to give it the typical irregularities of the original rugs.

On one side a selvedge is created, matching the design pattern and decorated with wool stitching. On the other side the fringes are woven one by one in the style of old Berber rugs.

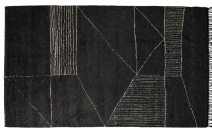

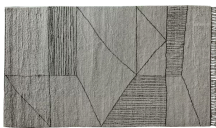

Covering / Coating: the b/w version is made using non-dyed wools while the other versions involve the use of vegetable dyes
